AFGHAN, DJEMAL-ED-DIN.

STORY OF A MYSTERIOUS MAN.
Aloting the Mahd's Cause-Arabi's Discorerer-No-Dobis, but Where Does He German Common and the Briton, General Gordon-whose relative situations so engrossed public attention a few weeks ago. He is more manufactured that the Briton, General Gordon-whose relative situations so engrossed public attention a few weeks ago. He is more manufactured that the Sepandine case the Familian on each possess much about situations on which no one can possess much case the firm of the sepandine after Tel-el-Kebir; and if he gets the best of it, he will be recognized, not perhaps quite as the expected one, but as one of quite as the expected one, but as one of those seven precursors who are to prepare the advent of the Messiah, who is first to appear in Syris, not in Afr.ca.

We are not to imagine, however, that because correspondents are unable to communicate important news that the agitation has ceased or that the agitation is idle. The season is in his favor, as no British soldier could possibly stand a campaign in Upper Egypt at this period of the year, and Mohatamed Achmet, fully aware that he has several months of breathing time before him, improves the shining hour by getting in supplies of arms and ammunition, which, imported into Liberia from England and the United States are carried to his headquarters imported into Liberia from England and the United States are carried to his headquarters overland by caraven, and by continuing an active propagandism at home and abroad, being ably seconded by the Afghan, Djemal-ed-Din. But who is this Djemal-ed-Din whom the Figaro calls the precursor of the Mahdi? Djemai says he is "only a poor derish"; but this I do not beheve, any more than I believe him to be Nana Sahib under another name. It was not because Na" a was a Hindu and Djemai is an Afghan that the identity of the two personages is impossible, for nothing save what he says himself proves Djemal to be an Afghan. But the "Beauty of Religion"—this is the meaning of his name—is only about seven or eight and ligion "—this is the meaning of his name—is only about seven or eight and forty, and the man who massacred the English in 1857 would be a good deal older, and besides he would have been caught and hanged long ago if he were one and the same. He now lodges on the fourth floor of the Hötel de Seze, No. 16 Rue de Seze, Paris. I go to talk Turkis i with him and listen to what it pleases him to tell of his intentions, which, I must add, is remarkably little. A living mystery is Dimal-ed-Din, of which the only thing certain is that he is not what he seems to be, although perhaps more is known on that point at Berlin than in Paris. It was toward the close of Rhedive Ismail's regn that he first appeared upon the seene, at least in his present form. He had been

Its Levantine adherents renounced all hopes of participating in any pointical movement, and is Museuman adherents boined the so-called not discourace the Afghan movement, and is Museuman adherents boined the so-called not discourace the Afghan renormal agliation of Museuman, and he cared little by what means agliation was produced. He had aglitated the "directing classes," and is next step was to agliate the masses, and for this he possessed qualifications. Boil and the composing an agate differ considerably in exist step was to agliate the masses, and for this he possessed of an amount of endition superior to that found even among learned Eastern pundits. Be astonished the doctor of EH Akhar by his oratory, and still more by the purity of his diction, which was a forrest as though be had been born at Mecta. He preached wherever he could find an andience, our work of the cartery of the country of the cartery of the general popular adhesion to the "lib- and other localities.

But of Arabi I only speak incidentally.

He was one of the instruments of Diemal, of which, as he was weighed in the balance and found wanting, this Afghan dervish is into to speak. Arabi is a sore subject with Djemal, and the non-realization of his great expectations in that person makes him exceedingly reticent about his new-chosen leader, whom he certainly "invested" before his campaign against Egypt's masters began, but where and how he declines to say. "I believe that he is the right man," he says; "in the Hadits of the Prophet it is predicted that in the one thousand two hundred and niluety-ninth year of the Hegira will be born a man, of whom the parents, like the parents of the Meccan camel-driver, will bear the names of Abd-allah and Esnineh, and Mohammed Achmet, the Dongolaw, fuffils those conditions; but to be the gentine Mahdi he must fulfil another condition, he must succeed in overthrowing Home. He was one of the instruments of Djemal, of which, as he was weighed in the balance the gruine Mahdi he must succeed in overthrowing Roma—f. e., the Christian faith—he must extend Islamism over the whole world, must put an end to war and strike, must guarantee to humanity 200 years of pose and happiness," "And if bedoes not accomplish all this?" "Then be is an Impostor." as id Diemaled-Din. Will emphasis, "and we must wait still longer until a true Mahdi shall appear;" after which the Afghan poured out and sipped complacently a glass of brandy, which he took "straight"—"by way of medicine," he remarked, and "don't be supprised; dervishes—and I am only a poor dervish—can take even of the presence of the explosion is unexplainable," was my next question.

THE NUMBER FOUR.

Four is the first mathematical power-represents the generating virtue whence come all combinations. The most perfect number, it is the root of all things. It is called holy by nature, recalling His unity, His power, His goodness, and His wadom. It is sworn by, and gives the soul its eternal nature. In playing-cards there were four kings—Charlemagne, David, Alexander, and Casar — representative of the Franco-German. Jewish, Macadonian and Roman monarchies. In the French Revolution the four kings meant the four philosophers, Moliere, La Fontaine, Voltaire, and Rouseau, and the four queens the four virtues, Prudence, Justice, Temperance, and Fortlinde. In 1660 heraldic cards came in, the Pope representing the king of clubs; spades, King of France; diamonds, King of Spain; hearts, King of Engiand. The four queens were: Marie of Aujou, Agues Sorel, the Maid of Orleans, and Justic Isabel of Bayaria.

The Wise Men of Athens sucrificed to Pisto when he died, at the age of eighty-one, figures which consumate a perfect number, 929. Mr. Groen, who died in 1794, discovered this property; that when nine is multiplied by two, three, four, &c., the digits composing the product when added give nine. Thus:

An Albany telegram says: Ephraim Triton and George Maxweit were drowned while bathing with a party of youths at Smith's Ferry, near Greenwich, Washington county, Sunday. One of the party, and the only one who could not swim, suscessed upsetting the boat, saying he would hold on by the beat-chain. The others tried to dissuade him, but he insisted. When the boat upset, he failed to eatch the chain, but caught one of his companions, and both sank, coming to the surface only once. The others reached the shore, got an oar, and waded out as far as possible. One of them got hold of the drowning men, but was forced to let go, and both sank for the last time. Tilton and Maxwell, who were drowned, were about twenty years of age. The bodies were recovered.
